

CONFERENCE LUNCHES

Each day, lunch was held in a different location:
Day 1 in Bobby McGees with 1950s memorabilia, and around the pool;

Day 2 in the Burley Griffin Restaurant to gain the fantastic views of Canberra's surrounds;

Day 3 in Cahoots Bar full of political cartoons and politico portraits.

Boobie Prizes

At the EnviroTox 2001 Conference Dinner, several delegates were awarded Boobie Prizes – so-called because they were not only boobie prizes, but because they also had Boobie chicks on the prize

– a Heritage Australia Poster featuring Boobie chicks on Lord Howe Island.

There were two types of Boobie Prizes – the Golden Goose Awards for anything remotely connected with finance, and the Lame Duck Awards for those courageous few who dared to come to the organisers attention (often through foolhardy acts).

The Golden Geeses at EnviroTox 2001 were:

- Jack Holland (Environment Australia), Paul Hughes (Dow AgroSciences) and David Loesche (National Registration Authority) for their generous sponsorship.

- Chris Hickey for voting yes for the honorarium for office bearers – forgetting within in a few seconds, then asking whether it had been done (well, it was that sort of General Meeting).
- Rick Krassoi for leaving Sinclair Knight Merz and setting up on his own – unfortunately the award gave no money or contracts.
- Mick Warne for his credit card being refused on paying for the conference events.
- Kathryn O'Halloran on behalf of the NZ contingent – they have made a significant contribution in the number of papers presented at the conference.
